Meet Teresa Hall, Reform UK candidate for Bath

An ex-teacher who spent most of her career in Bristol, Teresa has always been community minded and volunteered at her children's schools, church and local youth club. She left teaching so she could spend more time with her family and started her own business from home in tourism.

In her youth she supported many causes including anti-apartheid organisations, she is keen on renewable energy and bee friendly gardening.

Although she has strong connections to Greece, she loves Britain with a passion and is very proud of her British family history where both her father and grandfather fought in the two world wars.

She is acutely aware that left wing ideologies drive a wedge between families, communities, and societies. Although they profess to make things better they do the very opposite.

“ Teresa's aim is to pursue policies that strengthen the individual. Empowering people through action, democracy and education. ”

Strong, resilient individuals with good skill sets and education, build strong families, balanced and well-grounded children with purpose in life and pride in their identity and communities.

Two things are clear in her mind:

The current path is not working. Mountains of debt, expensive bills, young families struggling to get by, a housing crisis, and crime very much on the rise.

The hysterical pitch the climate conversation has reached is clouding every possible solution to issues of pollution and natural depletion.

Teresa is open to any conversation about ways of getting the country back on track. She wants to represent and serve the people of Bath in their true form, not the way they are portrayed in the media. Honestly and with humility. To find the best way forward.

“ Teresa decided to get involved in politics as an antidote to professional politicians who seem to have lost all connection with the people they represent. ”

Teresa wants to see drastic change and reform in every walk of life. She sees herself as having remained the same fair minded person she has always been, whilst Britain has taken a very sharp turn towards left leaning ideologies.
